Wandering Wok Tours ... discover the flavours of Asia!

A Culinary Tour Of Goa

Goa is unique to India and not only have the Portuguese had a great influence here, but also because of its position on the coast it has a cuisine which encompasses the flavours of Africa, Malaysia, Brazil and even China.

Goa, at the south-west corner of India, has a remarkable history, including 500 years as a Portuguese outpost. The influence of the Portuguese can be seen in the exquisite, crumbling architecture: in the east-meets-west cuisine which combines coconut milk, palm vinegar and chillies with the refined flavours of Lisbon.

Join me in this colourful and flavourful journey to Goa, travelling via Delhi, for 17 days of sumptuous feasts, exploration and relaxation. On the way to Goa we have a few days to explore the delights of Delhi including strolling through Old Delhi along the Heritage and Bazaar Walk and having lunch in a private home. We stay one night in colourful Agra for a tour of Agra Fort and the world-renowned spectacular Taj Mahal. We then fly down to Goa for eleven wonderful days and nights of culinary exploration and feasting, while allowing plenty of time for sun, sand and relaxation.
